Regularly breathing in construction dust can wreck people's life.

It can cause workers to die early, permanently damage their lungs, and significantly reduce the quality of their life as they get older.

The Construction Dust Partnership brings together organisations from across the industry to help protect workers against the devastating effects of breathing in construction dust.

Protecting your workers from the effects of construction dust needn't be difficult or costly. Making easy, practical changes to the way jobs are done can greatly reduce the amount of dust created, help stop it from spreading in the air and prevent it being breathed in.

Visit our website to take advantage of the free resources available that will help you identify the risk of construction dusts, provide practical solutions and give information to your workers. Help them understand why construction dust is a risk to their health and not just an inevitable part of the job.
